SEYMOUR, INDIANA, TUESDAY, JUNE 12, 1917.

PRICE TWO CENTS

SHERIFF ORDERED TO ENFORCE LAW

Duty of Registration Officials to Round up all Eligibles who Failed to Enroll.

PERIOD OF LENIENCY ENDED

Names of Few Men who are Suspected of Evading Law Have been Reported to Board.

Sheriff McCord has been officially notified that it is his duty to round up all men of military registration age who failed to enroll and to file their names with the federal authorities who are charged with the responsibility of prosecution. The order to the sheriff came simultaneously with the announcement by the provost marshal general that the period of leniency has ended and that men who are eligible to register and failed to do so must explain to the federal judge of the district in which they live. The provost marshal general stated several days ago that a period of liberality would be followed and that several days' leniency would be given for men who are included in the law and who for any reason failed to comply.

It is stated that the names of a few men who are eligible to registration and who have failed to enroll have been filed with the Jackson county registration board and now Sheriff McCord is charged with the duty of rounding up slackers. It is reported that some of the men who are reported to be suspected as evading the law will probably be able to show that they have complied with the requirements. Several days ago a report reached the board that several men in Salt Creek township had not registered, but an investigation revealed that they were unable to reach the polling places in their own precinct on registration day and enrolled in Brown county. While this is a technical violation of the registration law, which requires every man to register in the precinct where he lives, these men faced an unexpected situation and showed that their intention was good and there was no effort on their part to evade registration for selective service. Another report came to the board of two men who failed to register and when an examination was conducted it was found that while they lived in this county Marion county was their home and they had registered by mail in that county. It is believed that a number of the suspected violations reported can be explained satisfactorily. However, it is stated that if the board finds any eligible who has failed to register it has only one course open that is to cause his arrest.

The board stated this morning that it does not expect any trouble in this county. So far as it is known practically every man eligible for registration enrolled as required by the law. The fact that there were no registrations in this county after Tuesday shows that the response was practically unanimous.

While the registration was about 200 under the estimate of the census department for this county, it is explained that scores of young men were not subject to registration as they have already enlisted in volunteer service and are subject to call of the government at any time. The registration was also reduced on account of the National Guard organization. During the last few months a number of men enlisted with the regular army and with the navy.

Ten additional registration cards filed by men residing in other counties and states have been received by the Jackson county board since the official announcement of the number of men registered was made. This brings the total up to 1,761. The card coming from the greatest distance was that filed by Robert O. Hutchinson, who is a teacher in the State University of Maine, and lives at Orono, Maine. A number of cards were mailed from states in the Middle West.

BOARD REALIZES VOLUME OF WORK

Registration of Voters for Special Election in September
Moving Slowly.

SIXTY HAVE FILED BLANKS

Expected That Big Percent. of Voters Will Register by Mail or by Messenger.

The registration of voters in Jackson county for the special election on September 18 when delegates to the Constitutional convention will be selected is progressing slowly. The board convened Friday and up to noon about sixty voters had registered. Of this number twelve were women. The board is now completely organized and is ready for the voters to appear or to send their blanks.

The board is beginning to realize fully the volume of work that is ahead of it. W. A. Carter, deputy clerk, stated this morning that it would be with difficulty for the present board to register more than 125 voters a day and if the majority of voters postpone registering until the last few days, it is quite apparent that additional assistance will be needed to accommodate them. The board is quite anxious to have the work equally distributed throughout the entire period of sixty days and points out that if the voters will register early the additional expense of more assistance can be avoided.

This is the first time in the history of the county that women must register for voting. It is emphasized, however, that registration is not required for participation in the coming city election here. Registration for city elections is only required in cities of the first and second class. However, no voter can participate in the election for the selection of delegates to the Constitutional convention unless he complies with the registration requirement.

Registration may be made in three different methods. The first is for the voter to appear in person before the county board. The second is to fill out the blank before a notary public and send it through the mails. The third is to send the blank, properly attested before a notary, by messenger. In an election in which political parties are interested they will see to it that the attention of the voters are called to registration, but in this election party politics is eliminated and the responsibility of registering must rest with the individual voter.

Because of the inconvenience of going to the court house to register in person, it is believed that the majority of voters will register either by mail or by messenger. It is probably that residents of the various communities will be authorized to present the blanks for his neighbors and in this way the trip can be avoided except for a comparatively few persons.

This is the first year that registration has been conducted in this manner. Heretofore the registration boards have been in session in each precinct for one or more days just before the election. The law was changed by the last legislature which provided for the county registration board.

SUMMER CONCERTS BEGIN TOMORROW

First of the Series Will be Given by Seymour Concert Band at Shields Park.

PLAY APPARATUS ERECTED

Swimming Pool Will be Filled During the Week Affording Recreation for Hundreds.

The first of a series of band concerts by the Seymour Military Band at Shields Park will be given tomorrow night. The concerts for several summers in the past have been given in the business section of the city during the week and at the park on Sunday afternoon, but this year all the concerts will be given at the park. The charge was made at the request of a number of citizens who believed that the programs would help to popularize the park.

Adolph Steinwedel, director of the band, says that the members are prepared for the series of entertainments and have been practicing hard during the winter months. He believes that the programs at the park will be enjoyed by hundreds of citizens each week and says that the Band will endeavor to furnish the best music that it can provide. The entertainments will be given at the park on each Wednesday night for the next sixteen weeks, unless the weather prevents, in which case some other night will be selected. The band will also furnish a program on one Sunday afternoon each month. John Van de Walle, who has purchased the concession privileges for the summer, will arrange for concerts by out-of-town bands on the other Sunday afternoons.

Some of the play ground apparatus has already been erected at the park by the street commissioner, Joseph Brown, and his assistants, and will be ready for the children by the end of the week. The swimming pool will be filled today or tomorrow, it is announced, and it is expected that as usual hundreds of boys will find it a popular place of amusement.

It is stated that several important improvements will be made on the grounds during the summer. Since the play apparatus was installed there several years ago the park has been more popular than ever before and crowds of people spend the afternoons and evenings there. The children are especially gratified with the plans and it is thought that the grounds will be even more popular this summer than in former years. One or two custodians will be in charge of the property and the swimming pool.

Another weekly feature at the park this summer will be the union religious services each Sunday night. The announcement of these services was made Monday following a meeting of the City Ministerial Association. The ministers affiliated with the Association will deliver the sermons and the music will be given by a large chorus composed of the members of the church choirs.

Exerting Every Effort to Make Loan a Success.

By United Press.

Washington, June 12—By Friday afternoon seven dollars must be subscribed to the Liberty Loan for every man, woman and child in the United States if the two billion dollar issue is to be successful, according to figures at the treasury department today.

An average of one one hundred bond for every one of the nation's twenty millions families must be subscribed by Friday noon if the issue is made up. This means the American people must subscribe $230,000,000 a day to the loan for the remaining three days.

Treasury officials do not doubt that the nation will rise to this emergency and that the needed money will flow in. It must come at the rate of $10,000,000 an hour or $166,666 a minute.

Besides the thousand of agencies of the federal government 30,000 banks, thousands of business organizations and clubs and 400,000 boy scouts began today the final drive to make the bond issue a success.

REVISED FIGURES SHOW A SHORTAGE

Registration of Men for Selective Service About One Million Under Census Estimate.

600,000 NOW IN SERVICE

Big Number of Volunteers Not Taken Into Consideration in First Estimate.

By United Press.

Washington, June 12—Total registration for selective service will be approximately 9,250,000, according to revised figures given out today by the provost marshal general. This number is more than one million below the original census estimate.

While officials realize that there are probably thousands of slackers they pointed out that following the revision of estimates the number will be far less than first expected.

Revision of the figures was made when it was realized that in using census figures, officials do not take into consideration the fact that about 600,000 men of eligible age are ready have volunteered for service.

Another factor in the revision was the realization that census estimates, made previous to the war, did not take into account that in the last three years immigration has practically stopped.

A few more states reported registration totals to the provost marshal general's office, but indications were that all would not be completed for nearly a week.

Gen. Crowder's message to Governors said:

"Quotas are to be assigned to the several states in proportion to the

GRIP OF TEUTONS IS HARD PRESSED

Allies Wage Tremendous Offensive Everywhere on the Western Front.

ITALIANS ENLARGE AUSTRIANS

French Pressure on Base of Battered Hindenburg Line is Steadily Increasing.

(By Ed L. Kien, United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, June 12—On every western front today the allies were squeezing the Teuton grip with new strength. Field Marshal Haig forced relinquishment of additional Belgian territory held by the Germans. To the south the French pressure on the base of the badly battered Hindenburg line was steadily increasing.

Italy has apparently started another offensive in the Trentino. She has just concluded the first stage of one successful offensive in the Carso and Austria must keep great forces constantly massed there to meet the menace of the Italians within sight of Trieste. Likewise she must hurry reserves to the Trentino in an effort to stop the new offensive.

STANDARD OIL STEAMER, PETROLITE, SUNK BY U-BOAT

Vessel Which Figured in Important Controversy Before War is Sent to Bottom.

By United Press.

Washington, June 12—The American steamer Petrolite has been sunk by a German submarine, the state department was advised today in a consular telegram. A boat with ten men has reached shore. Two boats are missing.

The Petrolite figures in an important diplomatic controversy with Austria before the United States declared a state of war with Germany. The ship was attacked without warning on December 5, 1915 by a submarine of unknown nationality, but believed to have been Austrian. One sailor aboard the Standard Oil tanker was wounded, but the vessel itself escaped damage. The Petrolite has been engaged in transporting oil to the allies.

NATION INSISTING UPON ADEQUATE FOOD CONTROL

Protests Against High Prices Arouse Administration to Need of Regulatory Laws.

By United Press.

Washington, June 12—Methods to expedite action on the food control measure were considered by the cabinet today. The President is anxious that congress should pass the bill by next week. Protests against high food prices are being received from all sections. There appears to be more interest in the food situation at this moment than in the war itself. People who feel the pinch of high prices say they cannot be highly patriotic to a government permitting speculators to rob them. The President is determined that there shall be no further unnecessary delay.

FRENCH TROOPS IN ATHENS

The city hose wagon was taken to the repair shop today and a delivery wagon was temporarily equipped for use in an emergency. The department had hoped that it would be unnecessary to spend any more money for repairs on the wagon in view of the prospects of a motor equipment soon. The wheels of the wagon, however, have never been able to carry the weight and the running gears were so badly bent that the firemen were afraid of a breakdown and decided to have the gears straightened and other repairs made so that the equipment would be safe.

BIG DRIVE FOR RED CROSS FUND

Indiana People Asked to Give Sum of $1,500,000 to Aid in Work of Organization.

VITAL NEED FOR MONEY

$100,000,000 to be Raised in America in One Week for Relief and Protection of U. S. Soldiers.

ed by a Red Cross War Fund Campaign committee of which Governor Goodrich is chairman.

The members are: Governor James P. Goodrich, chairman; W. G. Irwin, Columbus; H. McK Landon, Indianapolis; President W. E. Stone, Lafayette; George Ade, Brook; Patrick Lynch, New Castle; George T. Dinwiddle, Frankfort; T. F. Rose, Muncie; E. V. Knight, New Albany; John L. Crawford, Terre Haute; Henry C. Murphy, Evansville; J. L. Bayard, Jr.; Vincennes; Fred Miller, South Bend; E. C. Miller, Fort Wayne; J. A. VanOsdal, Anderson; Col. J. J. Backman, Aurora; Joseph Shirk, Peru.

The management of the campaign is in the hands of A. F. Bentley, state director of the Red Cross, with an organized force of workers in each congressional district where a secretary is directing the county movements. S. P. Withrow, of Cincinnati has been secured as campaign leader in the field. A special campaign organization exists in the city of Indianapolis where an executive committee headed by William Fortune with J. W. Lilly and Frank D. Stalnaker among the members are in charge. H. W. Eldridge, of Allentown, Pa., is the campaign leader for Indianapolis. All over the United States the most active men are engaged in this same campaign. New York City for example Mayor Mitchell and J. P. Morgan are both on the lists of team captains who will work every day securing subscriptions during the campaign week.

The leaders in this Red Cross cause say that the people of Indiana must act and give promptly if the state is to take a foremost position in the nation-wide campaign for funds. But a more important reason for promptness is that America is in a desperate position and that the Red Cross is one of its mightiest agencies in the critical time. The great fund must be in hand for the protection and comfort of the American armies which are already starting for the blood-soaked regions of Europe. The Red Cross fund is to be used to provide war unit hospitals which will follow the American armies wherever they go. Ambulance companies, a branch of the hospital work as important as the hospitals themselves, are also to be provided out of the fund. Tuberculosis is sweeping the armies of Europe because inadequate defense against the white plague was not provided in the beginning. Part of the Red Cross fund is to go for safe guarding the American soldiers against the ravage of this and other diseases which are to be dreaded as much as enemy bullets.

America is going into the war to break the deadlock which now seems to exist along the east and west fronts of Europe. Americans must win the war now on European soil, or it may have to be fought to the finish on our own soil. Vast as the $100,000,000 Red Cross fund may seem, it is less than two days cost of the war as it is now being fought abroad and as it may cost should it be transferred to our own land.

So Americans are being appealed to to support their own interests in every possible way during this critical period,—to prepare for war by giving up their sons, and to stand behind the youth of the country as it goes forth to fight by entrenching the Red Cross as the one mighty relief force ready for all emergencies behind the battle lines.

There is no limit to the amount which a Hoosier may give to the Red Cross fund, but the gifts must be generous if the state is to reach its apportionment of $1,500,000. Although the actual canvass for funds does not start until July 18, several gifts of $1,000,000 each have been pledged in New York and large sums are also pledged by Chicago citizens.

Every county in Indiana now has a fully organized chapter of the Red Cross and forces of workers are ready to canvass for subscriptions, and in every county too the state committee urges that the appeal for funds be promptly responded to.

FORTY YEARS' SUCCESS

For a business to be successful for forty years means a great deal. Among other things, it means remarkable excellence in the products it sells. No inferior article can be sold on a large scale for so many years; and it must not only be good at the outset, but so good that the progress of forty years shall not develop any better article to supersede it.

So women can, with confidence, depend upon that old, tried and tested remedy for woman's ailments, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, still as popular as ever, though it was placed on the market before the centennial year, 1876.

PERIOD OF LENIENCY IS DECLARED ENDED

Governors Informed That Sheriffs Must Make Search for "Slackers."

Washington, June 12.—The period of leniency ended Monday for men between the ages of 21 and 30, inclusive, who failed to register for the war army last Tuesday. Provost Marshal General Crowder sent to the Governors of all the states a message asking them "to inaugurate from today a vigorous, aggressive and effective enforcement of the penal clause of the selective service law against all who have by their failure to register brought themselves under those provisions."

The penalty for failure to register on June 5 is imprisonment for a year and enforced registration, but Gen. Crowder immediately after registration day recommended that local registration boards provide further opportunity for delinquents.

The Department of Justice notified United States attorneys to release those already arrested for failure to register providing they have now registered.

Gen. Crowder has nearly completed a draft of regulations to govern exemptions and exemption boards, and expects to lay it before Secretary Baker in a few days for approval. The general believes no class should be exempted as such, but that local boards should decide on the circumstances in each individual case. He favors use of some device such as a jury wheel for drawing the names of those to be examined by the exemption boards. The regulations will be made public in detail after Secretary Baker and President Wilson approve them.

SOLDIER FAILS IN HEROIC ATTEMPT TO RESCUE YOUTH

Member of Second Regiment Indiana National Guard, Nearly Loses His Life.

New Albany, Ind., June 12.—Leaping into the Ohio River to save the life of a drowning boy, Private Glenn Vore of the Second Regiment, Indiana National Guard, came near losing his own life yesterday. He did not take time to unfasten his side arms and the weight of the arms and his water-soaked clothing, together with the swift current against which he had to fight, almost prostrated him. Had not his comrades gone to the rescue he would have been drowned. Private Vore went into the water to save the life of Robert Minor, Jr., 10 years old, son of Robert Minor, who while bathing in the river, went beyond his depth. He was carried down by the swift current and was drowned. The soldier almost touched the lad when he went down for the last time.

Hoover as an Office Boy.

By United Press.

Salem, Oregon, June 12.—Back in 1895 Bert Hoover was office boy for the Oregon Land Company in Salem—a good office boy at that. His uncle Dr. J. W. Minthorn, was the head of the company. Young Hoover thought he was worth more money. Dr. Minthorn didn't. Hoover left, wandering south into California.

President Wilson has announced that this same Bert Hoover—ex-office boy—is to be "Food dictator" of a nation of a hundred million.

But to go back 22 years—in California Hoover entered Leland Stanford University, taking an engineer's course. He worked his way through the school. An Arizona placer mine couldn't get water to the property, and placer mines without water are not much good. The mine owner sent to Stanford for a bright young man to solve their problem. The university sent Hoover. Hoover mastered the difficulty.

Later an Australian company heard of Hoover and sent for him. He straightened out another engineering problem. Then England called him and he worked there for some time. In the meantime he put a brother and sister through school.

Natives here are recalling the strapping youth of 1895 who did odd jobs around the Oregon Land company office at $35 a month.

S. V. PERROTT, INDIANAPOLIS
POLICE CHIEF ON TRIAL

Charged with Indicting Voters in the 1914 Election—in Federal Court.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, June 12.—With Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger, of the United States district court of Milwaukee presiding, the trial of Chief of Police Samuel V. Perrott and other Indianapolis officials opened in federal court today. Judge Anderson declined to hear the case because he presided in the damage suit of Alexander Campbell, a negro, for $25,000 against Perrott and other police officials in which testimony was given which caused Anderson to give special instructions to the grand jury, resulting in the indictment of the police officials.

Six of the Indianapolis men indicted have pleaded guilty to the charges and may take the witness stand for the government. The men are charged with intimidating voters at the 1914 election. Statutes under which they were indicted differ from those on which Evansville and Frankfort men were indicted. The latter were accused of buying and selling votes.

Beside Chief Perrott, those who went on trial are: Police Sergeants Wayland E. Sanders, Mortimer C. Hulse; Capt. Roy Pope; Herman Adam, city sealer; Frank L. Johnson and Oscar Merrill, lieutenants of police; Dennis Bush, former street commissioner and five other minor political workers who have admitted their guilt, were also named in the indictment.

Mrs. M. M. Nelson and grandchildren, of Colfax, Wash., and Mrs. J. L. Beldon, of Indianapolis, who have been the guests of relatives in this city for the past week went to Crothersville Monday evening for a short visit before returning home.

LATE PLANTING OF NAVY

BEANS IS PREFERRED

Can Be Planted in Gardens Any

Time Between June 20 and July

1, Bulletin Says.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 12.—Planting of navy beans between June 20 and July 1 on all garden space which up to that time has been occupied by early garden crops, was advised today by H. J. Reed, of Purdue university in a bulletin issued through the office of G. I. Christie, state food director.

This will permit the harvesting of two crops from the same land and also late planting of beans is to be preferred, the bulletin states, as it reduces to a considerable extent the danger of loss from rust that attacks the leaves.

"Growing of navy beans offers one of the best opportunities for gardeners to produce a crop of high grade food and of market value which can be stored for winter use," the instruction states.

It is practically certain that some change will have to be made in the manner of protecting the road just west of the Rockford wagon bridge from the back water that comes from White River after heavy rains. Recently the road was washed away. The opening under the new concrete culvert is too small and the pressure of the current undermines the levee on either side. The commissioners have found considerable difficulty in meeting the problem that is presented there. It has been suggested that a longer iron bridge be constructed. This road is one of the most heavily traveled in the county and should be in a good state of repair at all times.

Four hundred of the cadets will make the trip. Officers in charge of the camp granted the college men a leave of absence so they could attend the commencement exercises.

A PROFITABLE JOB.

The Indiana Council of Defense which is urging the sale of Liberty Loan Bonds, issues the following article by George Ade:

The Indiana Council of Defense urges every Hoosier who can do so to invest immediately in a bond of the Liberty Loan issue.

You do not have to go through any long rigamarole or ceremony.

Have a talk with your banker.

He will tell you how to enter your subscription and he will explain why the purchase of a bond is a good investment.

Do not hold off because you have no large sum to invest.

Remember that when you buy a bond, you are performing a patriotic service and you are getting something that never can shrink in value.

Indiana set an example to all the Union when enlistments were called for.

The state made another fine showing on registration day.

Now comes the third test of Indiana's loyalty.

Hundreds of loyal citizens, who had good reasons for not enlisting and who were too old to register, now have a chance to do their share.

Don't depend upon a few wealthy citizens or some man living around the corner to perform a duty which is squarely up to you.

An interest-paying bond with Uncle Sam as security, isn't that gilt-edged enough to suit any one?

The State Council of Defense is sending out this appeal because Indiana must subscribe not only a large total but must line up a host of subscribers.

If the bonds had been issued in large denominations and turned over to banks and corporations, the government would have been criticized for failure to recognize the investor of small means.

Ever since you can remember, you have longed to be a bond-holder.

Now is your chance.

Every shrewd business man in America is subscribing to the Liberty Loan.

Later on you will be asked to make sacrifices.

Now you are given a privilege—the privilege of getting in on a profitable investment.

Take advantage of it.

George Ade, Chairman.

The Democratic press bureau of Indiana has renewed its publicity campaign against the Republican state administration. The writer of the inspired articles raves and howls because advanced calls have been made on the county treasurers. The article fails to state that unexpected expenditures were necessary that Indiana might do its part in preparing for the nation's participation in the world war. Governor Goodrich at one time felt that a special session of the legislature might be necessary to provide additional funds, but after a conference with democratic and republican leaders decided that this expense could be avoided for the present at least. The attitude of the Democratic state machine towards the Republican state administration is especially noticeable because of the insistent demands of the democratic national leaders that politics be forgotten and that all activity be centered upon the war problems. The Republican press has endeavored to overlook flagrant mistakes of the national administration. It has said nothing about expenditures and appropriations and has given the administration loyal support. But its silence is not due to lack of information that would make very interesting reading for the heavily taxed public. If the Democratic press feels justified in attacking the Republican state administration for expenditures growing out of the war, surely the Republican press can reserve the same right. It is up to the Democratic press to decide whether or not its own request is to be followed. It is patent that what is fair for one is equally fair for the other.

The Cossacks are reported to have taken a firm stand behind the provisional government in Russia. If they are the caliber we believe them to be the most of the populace will support the new democracy as a matter of safety first.

Is the liberty you enjoy worth the price of a Liberty Loan Bond? The answer rests with you.

MOVE ON TO SECURE
BETTER LIGHTED WINDOWS

Leading Merchants Are Back of Plan
 For More Light in The Business District.

Several leading merchants are back of a plan to secure a better lighted business district for the city, and in all probability the Merchants Association will soon indorse the movement, and start an active campaign to secure the cooperation of every down town business house.
 The plan is independent of the ornamental street lighting proposition, which is in the hands of a committee, and is confined to store windows.
 It is the belief of those interested that the best advertising the stores and the city at large could possibly do would be to light up every window on the business streets every evening from dusk until eleven or twelve o'clock. Many of the stores, of course do this now, but the purpose of the campaign will be to have every one of them do it.

The Interstate Public Service Co. has promised to make a very low rate for current used for this purpose, namely, 1 1/4c per month per watt for lamp capacity connected, with a discount for prompt payment of 1/4c per watt per month, making a 1 cent rate. The company also will take care of all lamp renewals for window lighting, and will either furnish a man to turn the lights off at the specified hour or arrange for a time switch.

It is probable that a week in the near future will be designated for the campaign, and prizes may be offered for the best illuminated and decorated windows.

High School Girls.

All of the teachers and the girls of the junior and senior high schools are requested to meet in the high school assembly room Wednesday morning at nine o'clock to make arrangements for the summer work in connection with the Red Cross movement. By the vote of the two high schools they have been organized as an auxiliary unit of the local Red Cross Association. It is time now to go to work. Do not fail to be at the high school.

Miss Andrews wishes to meet all of the boys in her section at the high school Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock. All are urged to come.

The girls and teachers who are doing the Red Cross work at school need a great deal of old linen, old muslin, old table linen and material suitable for wash cloths. You are urged to look over your store, collect what you can spare, and have it ready for the girls who will call for it on Wednesday. Your help will be appreciated and the material put to good use.

Why Pay Rent?

When the same money paid in monthly in the New Building and Loan Association will buy you a home of your own?

Get out of the rent rut. Have one place at least where you are the boss.

Impossible, you say? Don't talk that way until you have consulted us. We will make you a most liberal loan and help you in every way to secure a home of your own.

Remember, your money you pay in to us earns interest, which is applied to the amount of your loan. Thus your money is working for you, and not for any landlord.

The time to start is now. Come in and talk the matter over with us. We are at your service.

 spected resident will banish all when Fall came on, I got so bad I could hardly keep going. My back was sore and weak and I had dreadful pains across my loins, which sapped my energy. I could hardly stand

In the Newspaper

The Ad that Got John D. Rockefeller's Money.

Suppose you wanted to get your proposition favorably before the richest man in all the Americas.

How would you go about it?

There are just two ways to tackle a job like that.

One is to treat him as an extra special, handle-with-care, star-salesman-with-kid-gloves, epoch-making sort of case.

Study his whims and fancies!

Tickle his soft spot with indirect approaches!

Gum shoe to him!

Work up to the actual business in hand like tip-toeing up a one per cent. grade on velvet slippers!

THAT'S ONE WAY. It's the way that is usually tried where richest men are concerned.

THE OTHER WAY is to two-foot to him through the straightest possible avenue of business approach.

Put the proposition up to him on its merits in exactly the same way you'd put it up to anybody else.

"But," says the gum-shoe specialist, "you'd never catch the big fish with open-and-shut work like that!"

No? Stop long enough to listen to this:

A few years ago a certain company put out a new product. It knew the product was the goods, but it hadn't much idea how it would take with the public.

So it started a test campaign of advertising.

Advertisement Number 1 was inserted in a New York newspaper.

AND THE FIRST CASH RESPONSE FROM THAT NEWSPAPER AD WAS A CHECK FROM JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, CALLING FOR A TRIAL SHIPMENT OF THE NEW PRODUCT.

There's the whole story.

Unknown product—newspaper ad—order and check from John D. R.

The richest man in all the Americas has, during his long life, been beset by about as many salesmen as any human being ever was.

They've tried every known angle of approach.

They've lain awake nights trying to think of ways to batter through the door to get at him.

At the very moment when he was calmly reading his daily paper and getting interested to the ordering point in the ad of a new disinfecting paint for chicken coops, it's a ten-to-one shot that not less than a dozen star salesmen were wearing out their brains trying to solve the riddle of getting at him with their goods.

BUT THE LITTLE NEWSPAPER AD BEAT THEM ALL TO IT.

The newspaper ad "got" John D. Rockefeller while the star salesmen hadn't even got within talking range.

Because the newspaper ad went to him in the form he himself welcomed.

He bought his paper because he wanted to read it.

Whatever it brought him got his willing attention.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING DOES THAT EVERY TRIP.

It goes to the people in a form they want at a time when they want it.

It goes to high and low, rich and poor.

It finds them in the receptive mood.

The check from John D. Rockefeller was the visible testimony that newspaper advertising GETS THERE when all other forms of selling effort fall down for lack of contact at the right time and in the right way.—Ad Route.

THE MEDDLER

By EARL REED SILVERS.

"Are you and Oliver Crowley engaged?"

Miss Mary Robinson looked squarely into the eyes of Ruth Hempstead, her niece, when she asked the question, and the younger girl blushed.

"Of course we aren't," she answered. "What makes you think so?"

"I'm only thinking what everybody else in town is talking about," Miss Mary remarked bluntly. "If you aren't engaged, you ought to be."

"Can't two young people just be good friends without bringing in the question of marriage?" she parried.

"Good friends, yes!" Aunt Mary snorted. "But it's got beyond that point with you two."

"Well, what can I do?" There was a hint of helplessness in the girl's voice, and the older woman softened.

"I don't suppose you can do anything," she answered. "If he intends to propose at all I can make him do it in two days," she announced.

"In what way?"

"I want you to have a friend of mine come to see you tonight."

"Oh, I can't; Oliver's coming!"

"Well, phone him tonight and tell him you have another engagement."

"But I haven't," Ruth protested.

"You will have. I'm going to bring Dick Stover up to see you."

"Who's he?"

"He's a young newspaper man from New York who's spending a few weeks in Glenwood, getting material for a story. I've met him a number of times in the office, and I've always intended to have him up for supper. So we'll make it tonight."

"All right, I'll phone to Oliver." There was a note of excitement in Ruth's voice. "My, but he'll be surprised!" she added.

That afternoon Aunt Mary paid a visit to the office of the Glenwood Record, the only newspaper in town. As society editor, it was her duty to write the personal news items.

She remained at the office until four o'clock, when a young man with smiling eyes and curly hair entered.

"How are you, Miss Robinson?" he asked pleasantly. "Hard at it?"

"Yes." She smiled back at him. "I want you to come home to supper with me tonight!"

"I'd be delighted. What time?"

"Six o'clock."

At six o'clock to a dot he presented himself at the Hempstead front porch. He acknowledged Aunt Mary's introductions to Mr. and Mrs. Hempstead, and then turned to Ruth.

"I've seen you so often that I feel as if I know you already," he said. "I've been here for a week, now."

The girl liked the way he spoke; she liked his smile and many other things about him; and as the evening wore away, she forgot about Oliver Crowley and the ill grace with which he had received her telephone call.

"You must come again," she urged when Dick took a rather reluctant leave. "I'll introduce you to some of Glenwood's young people."

Ruth thought about him quite often during the next day, and deep down in her heart she admitted that she was sorry that it was Oliver, and not he, who was coming that night.

But Oliver came, carrying under his arm the weekly edition of the Glenwood Record, which had just been issued.

"There's something I'd like to speak to you about," he said.

Ruth's heart leaped. He was probably going to say the words she had wanted him to say for the past six months.

"Have you seen today's copy of the Record?" he asked.

"No," she answered, "I haven't had time yet."

"Then read this."

She took the paper from his hands and read the item he indicated.

"It is rumored that a certain young newspaper man from New York has been visiting one of our young ladies on Maple avenue," the paper stated. "How about it, Ruth?"

The girl blushed scarlet.

"I'm glad that you are having other men come to see you. I have been monopolizing you for the past year or so, and I feel that I ought to stop it. I have a mother who wants me to live with her always, and I'm—I'm not ready to get married yet."

"Oh!"

Ruth was taken back by his frank statement. She didn't know what to say.

"So I won't be over so much after this," he finished. "I hope you'll understand!"

"Yes, I understand." The girl's voice was cold, and Oliver, recognizing danger signs, soon took his departure.

In the library Ruth went directly to Aunt Mary.

"Well," she announced, "your news item worked, but not in the way you thought it would. Oliver has thrown me over."

"Do you care?" Aunt Mary's eyes were troubled.

"Not very much," she responded. "Mr. Stover is coming to see me Saturday."

DOUBLE DUTY

A Dairy Ration Has Two Main Uses—Life and Product.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

A ration is divided into two parts: 1. The part needed to maintain or keep the animal alive.

2. The part needed to make stored up material like wool, fat, meat or milk.

Milk is roughly in solids, one-third each casein (protein), fat and sugar. The casein in milk can only be furnished by the protein in the food. The fat and sugar may be derived from either protein, fat or carbohydrates.

If a cow has the ability to give 50 pounds of milk containing two pounds of casein, and only gets enough protein to make one pound of casein, then she will only give 25 pounds of milk.

A balanced ration is one that has just the exact amount of protein, fat and carbohydrates that the cow needs. Just what this is we cannot ever say exactly, because the amounts vary from week to week and no two cows are alike, nor are feeds alike.

A practical ration is one that has sufficient protein and enough total food to make the greatest amount of milk without the cow losing weight.

A commercially successful ration is the one that makes the most milk or profit, keeps the cow healthy and enables the use of the most roughage.

All the hay and ensilage a cow can eat will keep her alive and make about 15 pounds of milk. Any more milk has to come from grain or grain feed.

The farm can usually raise carbohydrates cheap in the form of hay and ensilage, and, outside of clover, peas, etc., protein can usually be bought cheaper than it can be raised.

The average price of protein feeds with 20 per cent digestible protein was about $25 to $35 per ton before the war, but the prices are much higher now, while hay (clover) with 5½ per cent digestible protein has been rated at $10 per ton, so the protein feed at $40 would furnish protein about the same as clover at $10.

DIFFERENT COWS, DIFFERENT FEEDS.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

No suggestions that we can offer nor any other formula that can be made can be followed to the letter as a druggist follows the prescription of a physician. Feeds vary in their nutritive values, some being better than the average and some not as good, and cows vary in their ability to digest and transform nutriment. These conditions make it necessary for the feeder to use a good deal of judgment and not follow too blindly the suggestions of others. Any good stock feed is recommended as a base, to be supplemented by home-grown roughage.

CONCENTRATES FOR RATIONS

Taken From an Article by E. S. Savage, Professor of Animal Husbandry, New York College of Agriculture.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

A good rule to follow in all rations is to have at least three plants represented in the ration. There are seven factors which should be considered: (1) Bulk, (2) Digestibility, (3) Relation between the digestible protein and carbohydrates and fat, (4) Variety, (5) Suitability of the feeds to the animal and product, (6) Palatability, (7) Cost.

As an example, choosing the cheapest feeds relatively, considering material values, suitability and all, we would recommend the following mixture of grains as suitable for dairy cows at present prices:

600 pounds distillers dried grains.
400 pounds gluten feed.
300 pounds wheat bran or brewers dried grains.
400 pounds hominy feed.
300 pounds cottonseed or oil meal.

SALT FOR CATTLE.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Professor Henry says that a cow requires three-quarters of an ounce per day per 1000 lbs. of weight and six-tenths of an ounce per day per 20 lbs. milk. Therefore, a cow which weighs 1200 lbs. and gives 30 lbs. milk should have 1.8 ounce salt. It must be remembered, however, that salt is generally included in high-grade dairy feeds: It is well to give cows access to extra salt. They will take what their roughage demands.

THE PRICE OF FEED.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

Feed is handled on a smaller margin than coal, ton for ton. The retail feed dealer who buys in carload lots can sell as cheap as the manufacturer can in less-than-carload lots, the difference in freight rates being the dealer's gross profit. In nearly every instance, a group of farmers can order their feed, through a dealer, in carloads and make a material saving. The difference in freight alone will show a good profit.

Take the chill off the drinking water in cold weather and cows will drink more and produce more.

Don't figure too fine on rations. Be liberal but don't overfeed. You can kill all of your profit by feeding more than the cow can assimilate.

[National Crop Improvement Service.]

The human element in dairy feed is important. Two men may have the same equipment, one make good money, the other fail, while both are supposed to be feeding by the same system and the same tables.

The GIRL WHO HAD NO GOD

by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
AUTHOR OF "K," "THE MAN IN LOWER TEN," ETC.

CHAPTER I.

Hilary Kingston had been shot. Old Hilary had been a familiar figure in the village of Woffingham for years. The eccentricity of his gray derby hat, his beetling gray brows, his always fresh gray gloves, his erect, rather heavy old figure, singled him out from the mass of commuters that thronged the city trains. The gray derby was a part of old Hilary. Except on those rare occasions when he attended service at Saint Jude's he was never seen without it.

He lived on the hill above the village, with his daughter—had lived there for ten years. The hall was beautiful, but old Hilary received no visitors, returned no advances. Visitors thought this curious. The villagers, prosperous business men with smart wives, shrugged their shoulders. The man's house was his own. If he found that he could do without the town, the town could get along without him.

There was no mystery about the hall, and little curiosity. Cars going to the country club passed under the brick wall of its Italian garden. Their occupants sometimes caught a glimpse of Elinor Kingston there, reading in a rose arbor, wandering among her peonies and irises in the spring, or cutting sprays of phlox in midsummer.

The men thought her rather lovely; the women, odd, with her blond hair and dark eyes. The assistant rector of Saint Jude's, newly come to the village, met her face to face on one of his long country walks, a month or so before old Hilary's death, and could not forget her.

He led the conversation to her that night at a dinner.

"An exquisite face," he described her, "but sad, almost tragically sad."

"Blond?" The lady on his right was a Mrs. Bryant. In honor of the new assistant rector, who came of fine family and was a distinct acquisition to the village, she wore the Bryant pearl-shaped pearl. She spoke rather curtly. "I should not call her exquisite—but you probably met Elinor Kingston. Her sadness is a pose, I believe; she has everything she wants."

The assistant rector was young, but very wise. So he spoke no more of Elinor until the women had left the table. Then he ventured again.

"Don't join the army of those of us who worship from afar," advised the youth who had moved up beside him. "She's the loveliest thing in this part of the country. But, except our sainted rector, no one ever gets to put a foot on the place. It's exclusiveness to the nth power, and then some. There's a lot of talk, of course, or used to be. Old Kingston brings his servants from New York, and except an elderly housekeeper, none of them speak English. They used to say around here that he was a refugee, but that's all rot. He's a stingy old dotard, afraid some handsome youth like myself will captivate the girl. That's all there is to it."

The assistant rector, whose name was Ward, smiled perfunctorily. Instead of the gleaming table, spread with flowers and candles, with the gay colors of cordials and liqueurs, he was seeing a girl standing at the turn of a country road and gazing down into the valley and the distant village with somber eyes.

Faith, hope and charity, and the greatest of these is faith. Faith in ourselves, faith in those around us, and that sublimest faith of all which trusts in something beyond. To all men is given such faith at the beginning of life, and some keep it to the end. But here and there is one who has lost it, who cannot turn his eyes up and say "Lord, Lord." Old Hilary had not kept the faith.

Years ago he had not been evil. He had gone from philosophy into unbelief, that route which all must travel. But, unlike the many, he had not come back.

He had started with socialism, but socialism must be founded on the Christ, and him he scorned. So from socialism he had drifted to anarchy. To rob the rich and give to the poor, at first. Later on, to rob the rich, to incite seditions, to arm the rebellious—oh, it was comprehensive enough, vastly wicked with that most terrible lawlessness of all, that believes itself law.

To pit his wits against the world and win—that had been old Hilary's creed. "For the oppressed" had been at first the slogan of the band he gathered around him. "Against the oppressor" it became later on. Vastly different the two. Most of human charity and kindness lay crushed down and trampled underfoot during old Hilary's progress from Christ to Antichrist.

The band had been gathered with much care. Respectability, order, decorum—these spelled safety to old Hilary's astute mind. Most of them were younger sons of English landed families, with a sprinkling of other nationalities. Young Huff was an Australian, for instance, the son of a wealthy sheep-owner. Boroday the Russian—implicated in the bomb-throwing that destroyed the minister of war—was a nobleman. Old Hilary had got him out of Siberia during those early days when he righted what, to his crooked mind, were wrongs.

There were twelve in the band at the beginning, and for five years there were no changes. Then came the kidnapping and holding for ransom of Mackintosh the banker in Iowa, and the unexpected calling out of the state militia. The band had hidden Mackintosh in a deserted mine and three of the band went down in the shooting that followed his discovery. In the looting of Tiffany's vaults, which has never been published, a Frenchman named Dupres was killed; and only recently a tire had burst after the holding up of the car of the governor of Delaware, and their car, overturning, had crushed Jerrold, the mechanic of the band and old Hilary's chauffeur. One way and another, there were only five left: Talbot and Lethbridge the

To Pit His Wits Against the World and Win—That Had Been Old Hilary's Creed.

Englishmen, Boroday, Huff and old Hilary himself. And old Hilary's hour was almost come.

Old Hilary lived well, as he might.

His foreign servants were artists. He liked good food, good wines, good books. He even had a few pictures—from the leading galleries of Europe. He hung them in the house at Woffingham, with a cynical smile.

"Safest place in the world," he said to old Henriette, who protested. "The village has never even heard of them!" And so in this atmosphere of fine living and wrong thinking, of atheism raised almost to religion, of no law and no Christ, old Hilary had brought up his daughter. He had been proud of her in his way; absolutely selfish, too. She had had no other companion. He taught her his unbelief, pointing out the churchgoers, as they drove together on Sunday mornings, as slaves to a myth. Also, he taught her to hate a lie, and to give alms. Early in her life their drives together had been punctuated with questions.

"But if my mother is dead, where is she?" asked Elinor on one of them.

Old Hilary had eyed her from under eyebrows that were already gray. "She lives in the memories of those that knew and loved her."

"But I never knew her. Then for me she doesn't live! But Mademoiselle—" she checked herself. Suspicion had been dawning in old Hilary's eyes.

"Death is the end," he said tersely, and quoted Darwin and Haeckel to her. But at the end of the drive he interviewed Mademoiselle, and sent her flying to her chamber, where from under the carpet beneath her bureau, she got her rosary and wept over it.

Elinor was twenty the year her father died, a slender girl, fond of flowers, rather a dreamer. Well educated, too. Old Hilary had seen to that; she knew Malato, Haeckel, Bakunin; spoke French and Spanish—Hilary had spent much time in Central America helping the insurgents; it was he who financed the insurrection in northern Mexico—and wrote fluently the form of shorthand that her father had devised as a means of communication between the leader of the band. A keen-eyed, wistful-mouthed slip of a girl, shut off in the great house on the hill above Woffingham; living her life of big theories and small duties, caloused to robbery and violent deeds, and viewing wistfully from her windows the little children in the road below.

CHAPTER II.

Once a year the association closed its books. During all of the June before old Hilary's sudden death, Elinor had been busy arranging figures, collecting data in the cryptic shorthand she knew. Then, on the first of July, Hilary gave his annual dinner.

The band, from twelve, was down to five. Boroday, the Russian, glancing around the table, shrugged his shoulders. It was the chance of the game they played, and percentages would be larger. Nevertheless there was a weight of depression over them all.

Elinor was at her father's right, simply dressed. The dinners were always a trial to her. She was palpitatingly anxious that the papers before old Hilary be in order and accurate. They were her work. The deeper significance of the meeting she was not so much ignorant of as profoundly indifferent to. If her father did a thing, it took on order, became a law.

There were present Talbot and Lethbridge, the Englishmen; Boroday, whose rescue from Siberia had made him old Hilary's henchman; and young Huff. Huff was the mechanic. He had been trained in the Blériot works; airplanes to wireless, automobiles to automatic pistols, he knew them—all makes, all grades. If old Hilary was the brains, Huff was the hands of the band.

He sat beside Elinor, and watched her with worshiping eyes. Perhaps it was as well that old Hilary was intent on his food and on the business in hand.

The routine of the annual dinner seldom varied. Five of them then, that last dinner around the table, in evening clothes, well set up, spare, three of them young, all temperate, honorable about women—as polished, as harmless in appearance, as death-dealing, as the gleaming projectile of a twelve-inch gun!

First old Hilary went over the books. It might have been the board meeting of some respectable bank. He stood at his end of the table, and the light from the chandelier fell full on him.

"I have to report, gentlemen," he would say, "a fairly successful year." This is where it differed from a bank. The association had had no bad years. "While our expenses have been heavy, returns have been correspondingly so." And so on, careful lines of figures, outlays and returns, to the end. For old Hilary was secretary and treasurer as well as president.

This time, when he had reached the end of what was to be his last report, he paused and cleared his throat.

"Unfortunately, that is not all, gentlemen. 'Nothing can we call our own but death.' And it is my sad duty to report, this last year, the loss of three of our number. A calamitous year, gentlemen."

He might have been a trustee, lamenting the loss of valued supporters to a hospital!

Afterward, in the library, with Elinor embroidering by the fire, they cashed in. They dealt only in cash. Securities were dangerous. Once or twice Boroday had successfully negotiated with a fence in Paris, but always under old Hilary's protest.

The routine never varied. Elinor unlocked the door to a winding staircase, which led to a basement room where the steel vault stood in its cement walls. The five went down, returning shortly with the cash-boxes. The money was divided on the library table. It went by percentages. Hil-

LET'S WAKE UP

OUR town should wake up to the fact that some one else is occupying the seat that really belongs to us. This intruder represents out-of-town houses that take away business that should go to our own merchants. When will Seymour wake up? As long as we remain asleep the intruder will keep his place. Only when we decide on the policy of co-operation are we fully awake. We have seen the havoc and ruin of neglecting home interests. Now is the time for co-operation.

"If you buy out of town and I buy out of town and all of our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town?"

ary drew 20 that last year, each of the others 10—a total of 60 per cent. The 40 per cent remaining was divided, or sent as a whole, according to the sense of the meeting. Berlin got it all one year, for instance, to Boroday's disgust. Russia generally received a large proportion. The Chinese revolution; the defense of Berkhardt, who killed Ecker the pork-packer; a shipment of guns and ammunition to Central America—thus it went.

Although they preferred only money, now and then the loot included jewels. By common consent, such gems, stripped of their settings, were put aside for Elinor. They meant nothing to her. Had anyone told her that for several years her share had been greater in actual value than all the money that had fallen to her father she would not have believed it.

Four days or so after the annual meeting, the rector of Saint Jude's was always asked to dinner. And although the reverend gentleman would under normal circumstances have been fishing in Canada, he never went until this function was over. For old Hilary, de-testing his creed, respected the man. A certain percentage, then, of old Hilary's share went over the library table, after the dinner, to the rector.

"Use it where it will do the most good," he would say.

"The church organ—"

"Not a cent to the church organ. Buy the youngsters a playground, or—build a lying-in ward in the hospital."

Elinor's mother had died in childbirth.

The last check had been unusually generous. The rector, who had been smoking one of old Hilary's choice cigars, put it down and faced his host resolutely. It took courage.

"Mr. Kingston," he said, "the church needs men like you. Why be a Christian in the spirit and—avoid the letter?"

"Tut." Old Hilary rose and looked down at him. "I am like all gamblers. This annual check to your poor is the sop I throw to luck. That's all, sir."

And his tone closed the discussion. The word "gambler" worried the rector. He thought over it on his way down the hill to the rectory. But his poor were very poor. He cashed the check the next day.

Elinor was in the library that sunny August day when they brought old Hilary to her. She had never seen death before, except on the streets of Mexico, and for a good many years he had been all she had—since her last governess, in fact, had been discovered secreting the rosary and had been word-scoured from the house in tears. She fainted, and wrinkled Henriette laid her on a couch.

Boroday, the Russian, had brought the body home, and now he stood, looking down at Elinor and stroking his English-cut beard.

(To be Continued.)

For the Oppressed

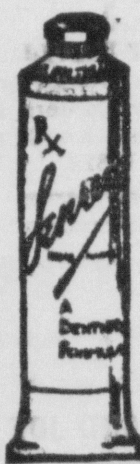

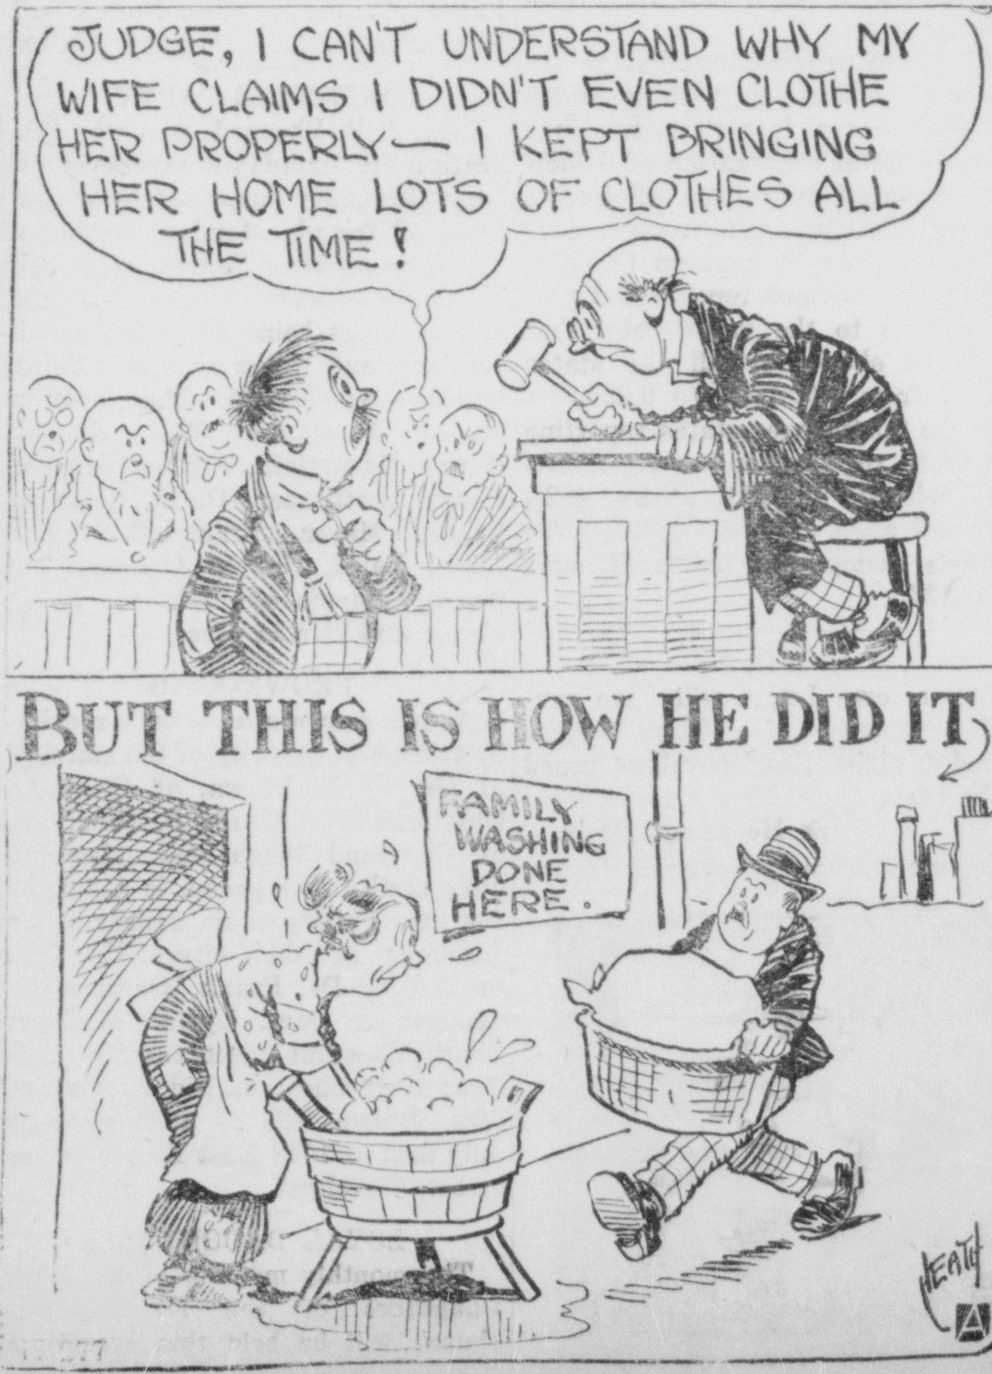

That was the creed of old Hilary Kingston, chief of the cunning band that robbed the rich to give to the poor, to incite seditions and to arm the rebellious.

Hilary was, seemingly, a respectable member of society, living in a handsome home on the hill with his servants and his beautiful daughter who was reared in lawlessness and taught from childhood the righteousness of her father's tenets.

But when old Kingston was accidentally killed and Elinor succeeded as chief of the band, changes came into the life of the girl.

An Ice Question For Business Men

DO you have anyone in your employ who works 24 hours daily, for approximately 7 cents a day, and who performs an absolutely indispensable service?

No! You'd be mighty glad to have such an employe at ten times the cost, but it's beyond the bounds of possibility. And yet, right in your home, a cake of ice is working for you as no employe could or would! Therefore we say

ICE IS
More than a Product—It is A SERVICE

Ice keeps the food-stuffs in your ice box pure and wholesome. It preserves them through hot, sultry days. It protects the health of your entire family. It adds to your comfort. It costs you a few pennies each day—approximately 7, perhaps.

It performs a service that you MUST have. You can not get along without it. Ice works for you 24 hours every day at a ridiculously low cost. Why not give such a cheap and useful servant a real chance? Use plenty of ice.

population as determined by the Bureau of the Census and not in proportion to the registration. The result is that every person who has failed to register is seriously increasing the burden of those who have registered.

It is requested that every effort be now made to detect and arrest persons subject to registration who have not registered and to bring each promptly to the attention of the nearest representative of the Department of Justice. Care should be taken that the lists prescribed in Paragraph 39 (men registered) are promptly posted and all registrants should be asked to assist in bringing non-registrants to the attention of the police.

In case of doubt as to the age of persons who have not registered, the tabulated records of political organizations and other local records should be consulted, and data may be obtained from the Bureau of the Census.

Among states reporting so far Ohio stands first in the proportion of registration to the census estimate with 113 per cent. Illinois has 104.7 per cent, Wisconsin 104.6 per cent, New Hampshire 102.9 per cent, North Carolina 103 per cent, Iowa 101.3 per cent, and Connecticut 100.9 per cent. Washington is the lowest state with 50.9 per cent.

When the provost marshal general's office closed thirty-three states had sent in complete returns. They showed a total registration of 6,358,388 compared to census allotments totaling 7,063,482. The returns during the day about kept up the percentage of previous reports and predictions as to the grand total that would be shown by all the states ranged from 9,000,000 to 9,250,000.

In the thirty-three states reporting the white registrations were 4,817,980; colored, 830,586; aliens, 482,439, and alien enemies 58,304. The possible exemptions indicated were 3,439,527.

How Eating Affects Health.

What we eat has far more to do with our health than anything else. To be sure, regular exercise, good air and a vacation in the country will improve the physical condition. But beyond them and above them the best setting-up exercise is the exercise of clean, juicy, sun-cooked fruits and vegetables in the blood stream. Richer and fuller life will leap in the veins when the circulation has been freed from the favorite poisons. Then there will be a zest in every hour. Desire for hard work and an ability to concentrate the mind on the most arduous problems and pressing duties, pleasant or unpleasant, will be faced with a poise and mental clarity hardly known in the days of the stimulating poisons with their false fire and their subtle evils mining and undermining the blood stream. For the blood is the life.

Friends and acquaintances armed with a knowledge of food values will no doubt launch them at your head with much concern when they hear that you are giving the diet a trial.—Exchange.

Too Familiar.

Soon after four-year-old John had been put to bed the rumbling of the first thunder of the season was heard in the distance, says the New York Post. He called his mother in great excitement. "Muvver! Muvver! Come here. What is that noise?"

"That is thunder, dear. We are going to have a storm. Just go to sleep and pay no attention to it."

"God makes the thunder?"

"God makes the thunder when he sends the nice, cool rain. Now go to sleep, dear, and don't call again."

An hour later, when the storm had passed, John's mother went to see that he was covered up, and found him across the foot of the bed, as securely rolled in blankets as a mummy in its wrappings. In the process of unwinding he awoke.

"Why did you wrap yourself up like that?" he was asked.

"God made his lightning wink at me an' I was scared," said John.

Woman Wrote Famous Hymn.

The author of the famous hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was a woman, Mrs. Sarah Flower Adams, who was born in England in 1805. Mrs. Adams was a writer of note in the English periodicals of her time on subjects of a religious nature. She had also composed a catechism for children, published in 1845. It is not known just at what time nor under what circumstances she wrote the famous hymn. It was first published in 1841, and the author, dying at forty-four a few years later, never knew to what heights of fame it was to rise. Since her death the lines have been sung by untold millions the world over and translated from English into every language spoken by Christian communities of every race and color.

To Develop Vast Coal Field.

Not only is Longyear City the most northerly mining town, but it bids fair to become a place of importance, now that a Norwegian company has taken over the vast coal fields of Spitzbergen. The enterprise is on a very large scale. The coal fields which the Norwegian company will develop cover an area of over 656 square miles, of which one-seventh has been surveyed, and it is estimated that this alone will yield something like 100,000,000 tons of coal from the first stratum, and the second stratum will probably yield as much more. There are other coal veins of which little is yet known. The enterprise is regarded as a national one, and eventually thousands of miners will be employed.
